1. Introduction

In the introduction, the background information with the current state of the research field and literature should be provided and carefully reviewed. It should define the purpose of the work and highlight its significance. References should be cited as the last name of the first author followed with the year of publishment, such as (Author's last name, year) for only one author, (First author's last name and Second author's last name, year) for two authors, and (First author's last name et al., year) for more than three authors.

2. Materials and Methods

In the Materials and Methods, the study area, data, materials, and methodology for the work should be described concisely but with sufficient details to allow the readers to follow.

3. Results and Discussion

In the Results and Discussion, provide a concise and precise description of the experimental/observational results and their interpretation. Discussion of the results should show how they can be interpreted from the perspective of previous studies and of the working hypotheses. For subheadings, use the following format:
